Animal Shelter To Mark 20 Years At 'Save Them All Ball' Oct. 26

Milestone Celebration For Non-Profit Organization At Tirrell Room

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Quincy Animal Shelter will commemorate a major milestone this month when the non-profit celebrates the 20th anniversary of its founding. The organization is also preparing to move to a new shelter planned for Quarry Street.

Sandra Sines, who was recently named the president of the Quincy Animal Shelter's board of directors, highlighted both initiatives in a recent interview.

"Some of the things we're working on right now, obviously we're celebrating our 20th anniversary, birthday, whatever you want to call it. We're focusing on that celebration and also trying to get some fundraising events going for 2020," Sines said.

"We're also on the verge of getting a new shelter at some point, so we're trying to prepare for that. It's still probably two or three years down the road, but we have to develop some fundraising efforts for that, because we're going to have to come up with some money as well. All those details aren't worked out yet."

The 20th anniversary event - the Save Them All Ball - will be held Oct. 26 from 7 to 11 p.m. in the Tirrell Room on Quarry Street. The event will feature live entertainment and life-sized board games, Sines stated.

"It's hopefully going to be a really big event at the Tirrell Room. We have live entertainment, a DJ, lots of raffles and silent auctions, and also life-sized board games, which I think are going to be really cool. Like Connect Four, Lite-Brite and things like that," she said.

"It really is a celebration of the fact that we've been able to stay in business for 20 years. We used to say that we're the kind of business that wants to go out of

Keenan: Ferry 'Perfect Fit' For Quincy

By SCOTT JACKSON

City officials have submitted a proposal to the MBTA to launch a pilot ferry program to provide service between Squantum Point Park and Boston.

The service is a perfect fit for Quincy, Sen. John Keenan said in a recent interview, while also providing updates on other T projects in the city.

Quincy has partnered with Winthrop since 2016 to provide seasonal ferry service between Squantum Point Park, Boston and Winthrop. The service utilizes The Valkyrie, a 73-passenger ferry owned and operated by Winthrop.

The pilot program Quincy has proposed would include a pair of ferries, each capable of carrying 120 passengers, running at 40-minute intervals during peak periods. The T would likely hire a contractor to run the ferries during the pilot program, the senator said.

"The MBTA has put out a request for proposals for a pilot program. They are in the process now of meeting with those who have expressed interest in the pilot program," Keenan said.

"Quincy is obviously very interested. Quincy's proposal would be that they would run two ferries and they would run the ferries, during peak hours, at 40-minute intervals. They would have the capacity for about 120 passengers per ferry."

Keenan said he supports the city's push to bring

Survey: Students Engaged In School But Lack Voice

By TOM GORMAN

A survey has found that Quincy public school students feel engaged in school but lacking a voice in deciding rules.

The VOCAL survey, a voluntary annual survey administered by the state Department of Secondary and Elementary (DESE) to districts in the Bay State seeks students' views on several topics relative to their school experience. Students in grades 4, 5, 8, and 10 completed the online survey last spring.

During a recent school committee meeting, the district's new Coordinator of Data & Assessment Marisa Forrester reviewed the preliminary results that will be used to maintain and grow areas of strength and address areas of concern both districtwide and at each individual school.

"The survey measures climate and learning in the schools from the student's perspective," she said. "The questions are broken down into three dimensions: engagement, environment, and safety."

The dimensions are further broken down into three areas: engagement includes cultural competence (valuing diversity and managing differences); participation (students feel engaged intellectually, emotionally, and behaviorally in the classroom); and relationships (students feel a social and respectful connection with teachers and peers).

Environment includes discipline (applied fairly and consistently), instructional (collaborative, relevant, challenging, and supportive); and mental health (access to support students' social, emotional, and well-being).

For safety, students were questioned in areas of bullying and cyberbullying (different types of bullying are reported and staff works to address it); emotional (students feel a bond to their

Keenan Optimistic Tobacco Bill Will Pass Legislature

Would Ban Flavored Tobacco

By SCOTT JACKSON

Sen. John Keenan is optimistic his colleagues on Beacon Hill will pass legislation to ban the sale of flavored tobacco products statewide.

Keenan, a Quincy Democrat, introduced the bill earlier this year in response to the surge of children using e-cigarettes nationwide. The ban on flavored tobacco products would apply to e-cigarettes and other vaping products as well menthol cigarettes.

"Flavored cigarettes were banned by the federal government in 2009, and menthol cigarettes sur-

Access the equity in your home or free up cash monthly Here's how...

Maybe you'd love to access the equity in your home but you're nervous about taking out an adjustable home equity line with interest rates rising. Or maybe you went with a shorter term and that monthly payment has become a burden. This is something that could work for you - refinance into a new 30-year mortgage. With 30-year rates still so low, lower than fixed-rate equity loans, it's definitely a home equity loan/line alternative. And also a way to free up cash monthly and make your life easier. Would a new 30-year loan be right for you? It's easy to find out. Apply online or call Angela Blanchard at 617-471-0750. SCAM ALERT #1:

NATIONAL CYBER SECURITY MONTH

October is National Cyber Security Month and there are three keys to staying safe online: Own it, Secure it, and Protect it.

The "it" is your digital profile – the personal things about yourself that you put online. Living in the digital age means putting a lot of personal information online like your home address, where you work, family members, and much more. Keeping that information safe requires a bit of work. First, you need to own it by understanding what you're putting out there (such as what you're posting on social media). Next, you have to secure it with strong passwords or using a password manager and enabling two-step authentication where available. Lastly, you need to protect it by staying current with the latest security updates on your devices and using Public Wi-Fi safely. Learn more at staysafeonline.org.

SCAM ALERT #2:

SCAM TRACKER MAP

Scammers work 24 hours a day, seven days a week looking for their next victims. The unfortunate reality is that millions of people fall victim to scams carried out by sophisticated national and international criminal organizations every year. You can get a sense of how widespread this is by visiting the AARP scam-tracking map at www.aarp.org/scammap. Understanding how widespread scams are and which ones are trending in your community can help us all stay safe.

AMAC Advises Seniors Get Their Flu Shot Early

"Almost all people who get influenza vaccine have no serious problems from it," according to the Centers for Disease Control [CDC]. And, if that doesn't motivate you to get a flu shot this year, the "CDC estimates that influenza has resulted in between 9.3 million and 49.0 million illnesses, between 140,000 and 960,000 hospitalizations and between 12,000 and 79,000 deaths annually since 2010."

"As you get older, your immune system gets weaker and you become more susceptible to the flu virus, so get your flu shots early," cautioned Dan Weber, president of the Association of Mature American Citizens.

In fact, the Centers for Disease Control [CDC] says that seniors 65 years old and older are at greatest risk of dying from the flu. The CDC reports that "between about 70 percent and 90 percent of seasonal flu-related deaths have occurred in people 65 years and older and between 50 percent and 70 percent of seasonal flu-related hospitalizations have occurred among people in that age group."

The flu season starts in late September and early October, but it takes about two weeks for the vaccine to become fully effective. So, Weber urges everyone to get their shots as early as possible, noting that the vaccine is fully covered by Medicare. He suggests setting up an appointment with your family doctor to get vaccinated sooner rather than later or visit the CDC's vaccine finder Web site [www.cdc.gov/flu/freeresources/flu-finder-widget.html] to find locations near you where the vaccine will be available.

"There are a lot of myths out there about vaccines, in general, and flu shots, in particular, that suggests offer reasons why not to get immunized against the flu. Perhaps the most senseless misconception people might have is that they need not be vaccinated every year to be protected. The most important reason for getting a shot every year is the simple fact that in the course of a year the vaccine loses its effectiveness. The makeup of the flu virus, itself, changes each year so a new vaccine needs to be produced annually. The CDC strongly recommends that everyone six months old and older should be immunized at the onset of flu season.

SCAM ALERT #3:

MEDICARE OPEN ENROLLMENT SCAM

Medicare Open Enrollment season is here, which means it is also Medicare fraud season. Between now and December 7th seniors across the country will be shopping for the best deal for their health care dollar. Unfortunately some of the deals they will be offered won't be deals at all.

Medicare scams are expected to spike during open enrollment season with scammers posing as impostors calling and emailing seniors offering free gifts or limited time offers. These scams are all designed to capture your Medicare number so the crooks can charge Medicare for services you didn't receive.

Be suspicious of anyone who calls, emails or visits you promoting a Medicare plan. Legitimate health plans can only contact you if you've requested information. Don't give personal information to anyone who calls or visits out of the blue and always review your Medicare statement to ensure fraudulent charges aren't included.

SCAM ALERT #4:

PASSWORD MANAGERS

One of the best ways to protect your online information is to use strong, unique passwords for each password-protected website you use. But keeping track of all of these passwords is not easy. One solution is to use a password manager – a software program that creates, stores and retrieves strong and unique passwords for you. Do some research to find an option that best suits your needs and budget.

SCAM ALERT #5:

ID THEFT: WHAT TO DO NEXT

We take a lot of precautions to protect our personal information, but we're not the only people responsible for our data. So many different entities have our personal information it's hard to keep track of. Our banks, health providers, email TV and Internet provider, retailers and more all have our data and many of them have been hacked. The reality is that most Americans have already had their identity compromised. So what can we do to protect ourselves after the fact?

Here are three steps to protecting yourself after your personal information has been stolen.

1) Sign up for credit monitoring that will alert you if someone tried to open an account in your name.

2) Place a free security freeze on your credit to help stop identity thieves from opening new accounts in your name.

3) Establish online access to all of your bank accounts, credit cards and retirement accounts and check them frequently.

Be a fraud fighter! If you can spot a scam, you can stop a scam.

Report scams to local law enforcement. Contact the AARP Fraud Watch Network at www.aarp.org/fraudwatch-network for more information on fraud prevention.

HOTEL "GREENLEAF" QUINCY, MASS.

THIS IS A 1915 postcard view of the Greenleaf Block on the corner of Hancock and Granite Streets in Quincy Square. Built in 1876, this was the first brick business building erected in Quincy. It features two polished Quincy Granite columns at the main entrance. The Greenleaf Hotel, originally known as the Robertson Hotel, was located on the top three floors until a fire destroyed the roof and steeple leaving only the three story building there today. On the left is Durgin and Merrill block built in 1886; it is still standing but it's covered with a metal façade. On the right down Granite Street is the old railroad bridge where the trains passed overhead until the Red Line was built below the street.

Supporting Cancer Awareness Locally This October

October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month, an annual international health campaign to increase awareness of the disease and to raise funds for research into its cause, prevention, diagnosis, treatment and cure.

According to the American Cancer Society, breast cancer is the most frequently diagnosed cancer in women. Fortunately, many women can survive breast cancer if it's found and treated early. Life-style changes such as staying physically active and limiting alcohol consumption are proven to be effective in lowering your risks. And preventative measures such as self-exams, mammograms and other screenings based on your personal history can lead to early detection and treatment.

Staystrong at the South Shore YMCA is one such local example of a program aimed to make a dramatic impact to improve lives throughout the South Shore community. Staystrong is a collaborative community program providing essential daily living support to cancer patients, cancer survivors, and their household family members – spirit, mind and body.

For Sue Belanger, Certified Personal Trainer – ACE, and Certified Nutrition Specialist at the South Shore YMCA, nutrition and fitness are a way of life. As a breast cancer survivor herself, Sue is acutely aware of the benefits of nutrition and fitness before, during and after treatment.

"The work I do as a personal trainer is so meaningful to me as a breast cancer survivor because it allows me to support people in a very unique way," said Belanger. "In my role at the South Shore Y, I've had the opportunity to support clients and friends not only physically through personal training, but in many other ways as well.

"My father died of cancer when he was 59, and I am a breast cancer survivor, so I have been both a patient and a caregiver. From these experiences, I know and understand how much the family can be affected by a life-threatening illness. The Y's new Staystrong program supports cancer patients, survivors, and their families and caregivers. Through the support of generous donors, the program is offered free of charge to anyone in the community – not just Y members – and is the only program of its kind in the area. Since the Y unveiled this program in the spring, 424 people have signed up and that number continues to grow.

"I encourage everyone to get involved in the fight against cancer by taking a benefit class, spreading the word, donating, or volunteering," Belanger added.

In order to continue to give back to cancer support efforts, Belanger has organized 5 benefit fitness classes to take place at the SSYMCA's Emilson and Quincy branches this month. The proceeds of these classes, which are open to the public, will be donated to the South Shore Y's Staystrong Cancer Support program.

For all those interested in participating in one (or more) of these benefit classes, visit www.ssymca.org to learn how to reserve a spot today.

of the Quincy Elks, we can help these students financially as they further their academic endeavors."

The event was held on June 27 at the Tirrell Room, with guest speaker Michael Bellotti, president of Quincy College and former sheriff of Norfolk County.

This year's class of scholarship recipients includes students from 18 different high schools, with 17 students from Quincy High School and 16 from North Quincy High School. The recipients will study more than 35 different majors at a combined total of more than 30 colleges and universities, the betterment of others."

Nationwide, the Elks are the second-largest provider of financial assistance for continuing education, behind only the United States Government. Over the last 5 years, the Quincy Lodge of Elks has distributed more than $125,000 in scholarship assistance to local students.

BBB Offers Tips For Halloween

By BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

Shopping for Halloween should be fun—not terrifying. With so many costume and decoration ideas, it's hard to choose what to buy, and where to buy it from.

According to the National Retail Federation (NRF), Halloween spending for 2019 is expected to reach $8.8 billion, with consumers planning to spend an average of $86.27 each.

According to the NRF survey, among Halloween celebrants, 69 percent plan to pass out candy, 49 percent will decorate their home or yard, 47 percent will wear costumes, 29 percent will take their children trick-or-treating, and 17 percent will dress their pets in costumes.

When it comes to purchasing costumes and other Halloween supplies, 42 percent of shoppers will visit discount stores, 36 percent will visit a Halloween store, and 25 percent will shop online.

Better Business Bureau recommends the following tips to avoid getting spooked this Halloween:

Look around your home

Before you head out to your nearest Halloween store, check what items you have in your home. You may find an old costume you can re-purpose, or Halloween decorations you can put out. Doing this will not only help you save money, but you won't end up with more than you need.

Rent a costume

Some people don't like the idea of spending a lot of money on a costume that will only be worn once, which is why they look to renting. While renting a costume leaves more room in your budget, know that the costume you may be getting may not be in great shape. If you opt for renting a costume this year, check out the condition of the costume first. Make sure you try it on and note any defects with the owner. Read over the rental agreement carefully and make sure you make note of the rental period.

Look for sales

Compare prices on Halloween costumes and decorations from various retail or online stores. Along with comparing prices, look for coupons and sign up for email alerts. This will help you get the best deals, saving you a nice chunk of change.

Always check the return policy

Whether you are shopping in a store or online, always make sure you are clear on the store's return policy before you buy. Find out how long you must keep your receipt, or what happens if you should lose your receipt. This will help you avoid any mishaps like unwanted items being non-refundable. Remember: Buying a bunch of stuff with the intent of simply returning it after Oct. 31st is considered fraud.

Shop smart online

When shopping from an online website, the first step is to make sure the URL starts with "https" and includes a lock symbol. The S in "https" stands for secure.

Look up the website's privacy policy and contact information. If it is not clearly listed, or they only have an email as the point of contact, take that as a big red flag and shop elsewhere.

Also, be sure to use your credit card instead of your debit card, as credit cards not only provide additional protection, but it's also easier to dispute a fraudulent charge.

Seasonal stores

If you decide to shop from a seasonal store, ask whether or not they will be open after the holiday, how long they plan to stay open, and if they will accept returns after Halloween is over. If they plan to close up shop November 1st, or refuse returns after, either consider shopping elsewhere, or take more time to be sure that item is exactly what you want before making the purchase.

More tips for seasonal "pop-up" stores:

- See if they have a website in case you have to contact them later.

- Save every receipt.
- Use a credit card so you can dispute problems with the card's issuer.

- Make sure you are clear on what items are FINAL SALE.

Attending a special event or visiting a haunted house

Before you purchase tickets do some quick research and make sure that there are no complaints about the company hosting the event.

- Check out the company at org. Read what previous customers have to say, and see how the business responds to complaints.

- Check BBB Scam Tracker and see if other consumers have filed a report about the event host.

- Search the business online adding the word "Complaint", "Reviews" or "Scam" after their name for different search results.

Blueberry Lemon Bread

By MARIE

Today's recipe is a new one that I found online. Since there is always an abundance of blueberries, especially at this time of year, this is one fruit that you can always find. The blueberries coupled with the added taste of lemon is a wonderful combination.

Pre-heat Oven to 350 degrees, grease a loaf pan

Ingredients and Directions

1 and 1/2 cups of all-purpose flour, plus one extra tablespoon to coat the blueberries
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup of either Greek yogurt or sour cream
1 cup of sugar
3 eggs
1 teaspoon lemon zest
1 teaspoon of vanilla extract
1/2 cup of vegetable oil
1 cup of blueberries – either fresh or frozen can be used frozen can be used

For the Glaze:

1 cup of confectionery sugar
4-5 tablespoons of fresh lemon juice

In a bowl mix the flour, baking powder and salt. In a separate bowl beat together the yogurt (or sour cream depending on which you are using) sugar, eggs, lemon zest, vanilla and oil.

Then combine the ingredients from both bowls together mixing well. In a separate bowl coat the blueberries with the 1 tablespoon of flour and then fold them into the batter.

Pour the batter into the bread pan and bake for 1 hour or until a toothpick comes out clean.

Remove from oven and let cool before removing from baking pan.

For the glaze:

Mix the confectionery sugar with the lemon juice until well blended and pour over bread while still warm.

Teff Pancakes

By SUSIE

Teff is a grain that originated in Ethiopia. It is highly regarded for its very high nutritional content (it is very high in calcium and iron, as well as protein).

It is gluten free and excellent for blood sugar management. It is also very versatile and delicious. Here is a very easy and delicious recipe for pancakes.

Enjoy!

2 cups teff flour (I use Bob's Red Mill brand)
1 Tbsp. Aluminum free baking powder
2 Tbsp. Arrowroot
4 Tbsp. Ground flax seed

1/2 tsp sea salt
4 tablespoons melted virgin coconut oil
2 cups almond milk
1 large mashed ripe banana
2 Tbsp maple syrup
1 Tbsp. Vanilla

Simply mix dry ingredients together well. Add wet ingredients and combine well.

Cook on heated skillet using extra coconut oil to coat with.

When tiny bubbles form on sides, flip over and cook until done.

Serve with fruit and top with coconut oil, or butter and a bit of syrup.

Chicken Thighs, Soy Sauce, Sherry Wine

By MARIE

When we are not eating a whole baked or roasted chicken, I think everyone has their favorite chicken piece whether it be the breast, thigh or drumsticks - and we can't leave out delicious wings! My family's favorite chicken piece is the chicken thigh as they find the thighs more flavorful.

Today's recipe for chicken thighs is made with just a few ingredients with a promise to be the most delicious way to prepare them.

Recipe:

4 to 6 chicken thighs
2 to 3 tablespoons olive oil
2 garlic cloves, chopped
Salt and pepper to taste

3 or 4 tablespoons of low sodium soy sauce
2 or 3 tablespoons of sherry wine (the kind of sherry wine that you can drink)
1 pound of mushroom slices
1 cup chicken stock

In a large skillet, and in the hot oil, sauté the garlic and add the chicken thighs turning them until lightly browned.

Then add the soy sauce, sherry and the mushrooms and the one cup of chicken stock.

Cover and simmer, stirring occasionally, for about 30 minutes until the chicken is done and tender.

I served this dish with rice but you can serve with noodles or anything at all. Enjoy!!

'Four Centuries Of Christmas In N.E.' Topic At Milton Library Nov. 21

The Milton Historical Society will host 'The Spirit of Christmas Past: Four Centuries of Christmas in New England,' on Thursday, Nov. 21 at the Milton Public Library, 476 Canton Ave., Milton, in the Keys Room.

The program will be presented by Kenneth Turino, manager of Community Engagement and Exhibitions at Historic New England.

This well-illustrated lecture traces the development of the celebration of Christmas from the time it was outlawed in 17th Century New England through the beginning of the 21st Century when all the trappings of a traditional Christmas were in place. For many, the celebration of Christmas today is the most important holiday of the year. But many of the customs which we take for granted as part of the current holiday festivities and religious celebrations are actually a product of more recent history.

The presentation will look at how Christmas was transformed from a rowdy celebration to a family-centered event.

Among topics discussed is how the Christmas tree became popular, halls were decked, and Santa Claus came to town. program explores the rich history of the Native Americans, its first residents.

The event is free and open to the public. Light refreshments will be available.

Kenneth Turino is manager of Community Partnerships and Resource Development at Historic New England, the oldest, largest, and most comprehensive regional heritage organization in the country.

Turino oversees community engagement projects throughout the six New England states and is responsible for the exhibitions program at Historic New England. He frequently consults on interpretive planning and community engagement projects at historic sites. Head Lice: Signs, Symptoms, Effective Elimination

A Message From Ruth Jones, City Of Quincy Health Commissioner

By RUTH JONES
MSPH, BSN, RN,
BC, CP-FS

Head lice (Pediculus humanus capitis) are parasites that are found on human heads. They spread from person to person by head-to-head contact through direct contact with the hair of an infected person.

Head lice can also spread by personal contact or the sharing of combs, brushes, hats, and other clothing items. Although itching may be a sign of a lice infestation, frequently, individuals have no symptoms. Consider that although the most reliable sign of an infestation is the presence of a live louse or nymph, the presence of nits may be a sign that there is or has been an active infestation.

Head lice infestation is very common, though the precise frequency of infections is unknown, estimates span from 6-12 million cases yearly. Those who come in close contact with someone who has head lice, or their contaminated clothing and other belongings, are at risk for acquiring head lice. Thus, it is easy for head lice to be transferred from one person to another. Head lice are a common problem with school-aged children. Preschool and elementary-school children (3-11 years of age) and their families are infected most often, and females contract head lice more often than males.

There are multitudes of ways to contract head lice:

- Contact with an already infected person (common during play, school, or sports activities, and at school, home, slumber parties, or camp.)

- Wearing infested clothing, such as hats, scarves, coats, sports uniforms, or hair ribbons

- Using infested combs, brushes, or towels

- Lying on a bed, couch, pillow, carpet, or stuffed animal that has recently been in contact with a person with lice (this risk is very low if more than 48 hours has passed since the exposure)

Keep in mind that getting a head lice infection has no correlation with personal hygiene. Anyone can become infested with head lice.

There are three forms of lice, the nit, the nymph, and the adult louse.

- Nits are lice eggs. They are difficult to see and are often confused with dandruff or hair-spray droplets. Nits are found securely attached to the hair shaft. They are oval shaped, 2-3 mm in length and usually yellow to white in color. They traditionally take about a week to hatch.

- The nit hatches into a baby louse called a nymph. It looks like an adult head louse but is smaller. Nymphs progress into adults about seven days after hatching. To live, the nymph must feed on human blood.

- The adult louse is about the size of a sesame seed, has six legs, and is tan to grayish-white in color. Females lay nits; they are usually larger than males. Adult lice can live up to 30 days on a person's head. To live, adult lice need to feed on human blood. If the louse falls off a person, it dies within 48 hours.

Head lice are most regularly located on the scalp behind the ears and close to the neckline at the back of the neck. Head lice hold on to hair with hook-like claws that are found at the end of each of their six legs. They are rarely located on the body, eyelashes, or eyebrows.

Signs and symptoms include:

- a tickling feeling of something moving in the hair

- itching
- sores on the head
- sores on the head can sometimes become infected
- irritability.

Head lice can be identified by looking closely through the hair and scalp for nits, nymphs, or adults. Locating a nymph or adult may be difficult because there are usually only a few of them, and they tend to move quickly. Nonetheless, the presence of nits close to the scalp confirms that a person is infested. If the nits are located more than ¼ inch from the scalp, the infestation is possibly an old one. If you are unsure the diagnosis should be made by a health care professional, school nurse, or a professional from the local health department.

For effective elimination of head lice, the infested individual, family members that are also infested, and the home must all be treated. Over-the-counter (OTC) or prescription medications are used to treat the affected people and their families. There are many brands and package directions should be followed.

Treating the whole house is essential. Follow these tips:

- Machine wash all washable clothing and bed linens that the infested person touched during the two days before treatment to kill the lice and nits. Use the hot water cycle to wash clothes. Dry laundry using the hot cycle for at least 20 minutes.

- Dry clean clothing that is not washable (coats, hats, scarves, etc.), or store all clothing, stuffed animals, comforters, etc., that cannot be washed or dry cleaned into a plastic bag and seal it for two weeks (by this time, any nits that have persisted will have hatched and the nymphs would die without a food source).

- Soak combs and brushes for one hour in rubbing alcohol or wash with soap and hot water and then place in bag and leave in freezer for two days.

- Vacuum the floor and furniture. Do not use fumigant sprays, these can be toxic if inhaled.

Although a person could develop a new infestation from being re-exposed to an infested individual, self-re-infestation is the most customary way for the infestation to reappear. The CDC recommends examining the individual for two to three weeks to confirm that there are no new nits or lice.

Ruth Jones is the health commissioner for the City of Quincy.

Social Security Matters

Ask Rusty: What Will My Widow's Benefit Be?

By RUSSELL GLOOR

AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association Of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: My husband just started receiving Social Security Disability in June. He is diagnosed with a terminal disease that likely he will rapidly succumb to. He will be 65 in October 2019. I turned 62 July 2019. I was his caregiver when he was at death's door and was pulled back to 75% full life on immunotherapy. We see him starting to go downhill again; it creeps, then starts moving rapidly with the symptoms. I will be the caregiver again for round 2 that has no brakes to stop it this time - no do over. After he passes, when does the disability SS amount stop and what amount starts coming to me in my name as his widow, at my age? Signed: Survivor under age 65

Dear Survivor: Please know that you have my sympathy for what you and your husband are going through. Let me at least try to ease your anxiety by answering your Social Security questions.

Your husband's disability benefit will cease in the month he passes. Although, depending upon the date, he may receive a disability payment for the month he passes (it would be received the following month), that payment, if received, will need to be returned to Social Security (SS). Social Security will only pay up to the last full month your husband is alive. The funeral home is supposed to notify Social Security of your husband's passing, but you should verify that they will be doing that. Your benefit as your husband's survivor will be based upon the SS disability amount your husband was receiving at his death.

Although your survivor benefit will be based upon the amount your husband was receiving, if you take it before you reach your full retirement age (FRA) the survivor benefit will be reduced. Your full retirement age for the widow's benefit is 66 plus 2 months (versus your normal FRA of 66 1/2). You have a choice to take the reduced survivor benefit early (before your FRA), or wait until your FRA to claim the full amount your husband was collecting at his death. If you claim your widow's benefit early, the reduction will be about 4.75% for each year earlier than your FRA that you claim it. Your survivor benefit reaches maximum at your widow's FRA. You must apply for your widow's benefit in person with Social Security and you should contact your local office by phone first to make an appointment. You can easily find your local SS office contact information at this link: www.ssa.gov/locator.

Taken at age 62, the survivor benefit will be reduced by about 20%. When to claim your survivor benefit might be influenced by whether you are eligible for Social Security benefits from your own lifetime work record. If you are eligible for your own benefit, you should look at what your own benefit will be at age 70. If it will be more than your survivor benefit, you should make sure to file a "restricted application" for survivor benefits to allow your own benefit to continue to grow. It will grow until you are 70, at which time you would switch from the lower survivor benefit to your own (you get whichever benefit is higher). Your decision on when to claim the survivor benefit might also be influenced by your plans for working. Since you have not yet reached your normal full retirement age (66 + 6 months), any Social Security benefit you claim before that (including your survivor benefit) will be subject to Social Security's earnings test. The "earnings limit" for 2019 is $17,640 (changes annually) and if you exceed that, Social Security will take back benefits equal to $1 for every $2 you are over the limit. The earnings limit will be in effect until you reach your normal full retirement age, at which point it goes away. Once again, you have my sympathy for the difficulties you are experiencing, but fortunately your Social Security widow's benefit will be available to you when your husband passes.

Sheriff McDermott Discusses New Initiatives, Re-Election

By SCOTT JACKSON

The term 'face cards' has a new meaning in the Dedham jailhouse, where inmates recently received new decks of playing cards featuring the faces of at-large suspects, victims of unsolved crimes and missing persons.

Norfolk County Sheriff Jerry McDermott had the new decks of playing cards printed and they were distributed recently in the Norfolk County Correctional Center. Each of the county's 28 police departments received a deck as well.

McDermott discussed the new playing cards in a recent interview along with other initiatives, including plans to move the county's female inmates to the Dedham jail from a state prison. He also discussed his political future.

The new playing cards, dubbed the Mass Most Wanted Deck, were distributed starting on Sept. 24. Each card includes a picture of an at-large suspect, crime victim or missing person, plus other biographical details.

By distributing the new cards, McDermott said he hopes to get inmates to speak to law enforcement.

"It makes sense because you've got inmates with recreation time during the day," he said. "Maybe they have a grudge with someone they used to run with in a gang and now they are on the inside and perhaps that former gang member and friend is out dating their girl or something, so they might have a little incentive to say, 'son of a gun, I know who killed this person, or I'm looking at the picture of a guy who is a serial B&E artist, I'm going to give him up.'"

"In every prison and in every jail across the country, it's not really spoken about, but there are informants. There is no way that police in any big city can do their job without having some informants on the street."

"Within certain guidelines you can probably incentivize people by saying we'll give you extra time and contact visits if your mother comes to visit you. Or, instead of buying the regular meal of food for lunch today, we'll let you buy something from the vendor from the canteen. Little things like that. It's not really like you're bribing them - you're incentivizing them - and the hook is, you can tell us something, but if the DA's investigators came back and say it's bo-

NORFOLK COUNTY SHERIFF Jerome McDermott announced the distribution of a new deck of playing cards featuring information on at-large suspects, victims of crime and missing persons during a recent press conference. gus, the gig is up. It has to be credible and actionable."

Inmates, McDermott added, already play cards during their spare time and the new deck will be the only one used going forward.

"They have time on their hands. What we find is whether they are doing basketball, watching TV, a lot of them have signed up for classes and programs, but they do play cards. So, it's not that they didn't play cards in jail before. Now they are only going to be allowed to play with this deck of cards," McDermott said.

Going forward, the sheriff said he plans to replace about a dozen cards in each deck every few months as suspects are taken into custody and crimes are solved.

"Every three months we'll probably have to pull some cards. Right off the bat, within the first two days...we had a guy in on charges," he said.

The new decks have been positively received by the state's 13 other sheriffs, Norfolk District Attorney Michael Morrissey and the county's police chiefs, McDermott said.

"The reaction has been very positive," he said. "We have 14 county sheriffs and once a month we meet - the Mass. Sheriff's Association. Way back when I got the appointment, about 10 months ago, I had talked to some of the sheriffs about this and they said it sounds like a good idea, let's see if it works. I said I'm going to do it first in Norfolk County and we'll see if it works then.

"We all kind of joke amongst each other that we can mirror or copy what some other sheriff is doing if it is working. For this project, I think everyone is waiting to see, but it was positive."

"The DA, Morrissey, liked it. The 28 police chiefs meet once a month - the Norfolk County Police Chiefs Association - and to

Talking to Your Son About Abusive Relationships

Boys receive conflicting messages about how to act in relationships from an early age. Many boys are taught to "never hit a girl" and to "be a gentleman". As they grow up, they might be given the advice "happy wife, happy life" by an older relative. At the same time, boys are taught to associate femininity with weakness, and to assert their masculinity by asserting power over women: "you run like a girl", "you have to 'wear the pants' in your relationship", "boys will be boys". These vague, and often contradictory messages can leave boys feeling confused about how they should act in a romantic relationship.

Parents should feel empowered and encouraged to talk to their sons about healthy relationships in the same way that many talk to their daughters. People of all genders can be victims of abuse, and boys can face unique challenges to recognizing the abuse or seeking help. They may feel embarrassed, that they won't be taken seriously, or that they should be able to handle the situation alone. They may hear from their friends that "women are crazy", and assume the abuse is normal. Talk to your son about how to recognize the signs of an abusive relationship. Remind him that abuse is never the victim's fault, and that it is serious. Encourage him to come to you to talk through challenges he may be having with his partner.

Additionally, talk to your son about how to be a healthy partner. Teach him that he and his partner should be equals, and supportive of each other's goals and relationships. Boys often feel pressure to be stoic, in-control, and unbothered. Remind him that compassion, sensitivity, and compromise are healthy qualities for all genders, and will lead him to have deeper and more loving relationships.

vived. The industry has used menthol cigarettes to target communities of color and to target young people," Keenan said. "As smoking rates dropped, they remained steady for those who used menthol...and then the e-cigarette industry introduced flavors and youth use went through the roof."

The Food and Drug Administration in 2018 found the number of high school students using e-cigarettes—defined by use on at least one day in the past 30 days—increased 78 percent, from 11.7 to 20.8 percent, between 2017 and 2018. The number of middle schoolers using e-cigarettes rose by 48 percent over the same period to 4.9 percent of all middle school students.

Keenan said children as young as 10 have been treated for nicotine addiction after vaping and newer reports put the number of high schoolers who vape at 27 percent. He called the situation an epidemic.

"When you have at least 27 percent of your students in school vaping pretty regularly, I think it's an epidemic. In a class of 100, 27 of them are addicted to nicotine and will be addicted to nicotine for the rest of their lives. The studies show they are at greater risk for switching back to combustible cigarettes," Keenan said.

"That's just not good. All the progress we made over the course of about 20 years in combatting tobacco use and nicotine use has just been wiped out over the course of the past two years. If we don't stop it now, it will just continue to spin out of control."

Keenan is optimistic his colleagues will support his legislation.

"I have met with pretty much every member of the Senate one on one and have had rather in-depth, extended conversations about what it is we're doing, and the support has been overwhelmingly positive," he said. "They are incredibly alarmed about what's going on. They hear it from their school superintendents, from principals, from teachers, from parents and from kids."

"The American Heart Association, the American Cancer Society—they are all supportive of this...they all recognize the most effective way to stop kids being targeted is to ban flavored tobacco products, so the support is very broad."

The senator believes Gov. Charlie Baker would sign the bill into law if approved by the Legislature.

"The governor has always stood for kids and I think that he will stand for kids on this as well," Keenan said.

an said.

Baker in September announced a four-month ban on the sale of all vaping products, including tobacco and marijuana, in person and online through Jan. 25, 2020. The governor announced the ban amid a growing number of vaping-related respiratory illnesses and deaths seen nationwide; at least 805 confirmed and probable cases of lung injury associated with e-cigarette product use or vaping has been reported to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention by 46 states and the U.S. Virgin Island, including a dozen deaths.

Keenan said he supported Baker's decision to enact the four-month ban.

"Given the number of cases in Massachusetts and what he was hearing nationally, I think it was something that had to be done,"

Keenan said. "We've been focusing on the bigger issue though, which is the targeting of young people by the vaping and Big Tobacco industry and the number of young people that have become addicted to these products."

"If you didn't have that initially, then you wouldn't have the situation now, I believe, with some of the illnesses. We're going to stay focused on young people and we'll see what the commissioner of public health comes up with in terms of the causes. I spoke to her as recently as yesterday afternoon and they are still trying to figure out what's going on."

The governor, Keenan noted, also took steps to make smoking cessation products more readily available for residents to looking to quit tobacco.

"Part of the governor's proposal that I really strongly supported was his focus on cessation products," Keenan said. "He's made those products available to people who are addicted to nicotine basically with a standing order at pharmacies."

"I think that's good and that's where the focus should be—getting people who have been targeted, particularly young people, by the industry to quit vaping rather than have them go out of state to get their products or switch over to cigarettes. This is a great chance to get them free from nicotine."

Keenan noted his legislation would only ban flavored vaping products, while the governor's temporary ban applies to all vaping products.

"We're focusing on the targeting of kids and flavored tobacco products," he said.

The senator said it would be difficult to predict the short-term fiscal impacts of banning flavored tobacco products but noted health care costs would decrease in the long run.

"The long-term impacts of continuing to get people addicted to tobacco, particularly cigarette products, is just enormous and we know it," Keenan said. "History shows it has cost us billions of dollars across the country and I would say from menthol cigarettes alone here in Massachusetts, just tens of millions of dollars in long-term health problems we deal with—respiratory illnesses, diabetes, heart conditions."

"Smoking is still, I believe, the number one cause of non-accident...deaths."

State Senate Passes Student Opportunity Act

Keenan Applauds Advocates, Lawmakers For $1.5 Billion New Investment In Public Schools

The Massachusetts State Senate unanimously passed Oct. 3 the Student Opportunity Act, voting to invest an unprecedented $1.5 billion dollars in public education across the Commonwealth.

Following years of discussion on how to improve public school funding in Massachusetts, this bill makes significant new investments in employee health care costs and special education, and provides additional funds for low-income students and English language learners.

"The best stock we have in our future is in the education of our children, and this bill represents the Commonwealth's commitment to high-quality, equitable education for all," said Sen. John Keenan (D - Quincy). "I am proud today to stand with students, teachers, advocates, and my colleagues in the Senate to pass this bill that will provide all our students, regardless of income or zip-code, the tools and foundation they need to succeed."

The Student Opportunity Act fully implements recommendations from the Foundation Budget Review Commission (FBRC), a state commission assembled to identify ways Massachusetts can provide more adequate and equitable funding for public schools. Based on guidance from the FBRC, as well as from teachers, students, administrators, school committees, and advocates throughout the state, the bill reworks the school finance formula to provide greater funding to schools, especially those serving high percentages of low-income students. The bill also includes increased funding for transportation, school buildings, and special education.

"This historic level of investment in our schools was made possible by the many students, teachers, administrators, school committees, parents, and advocates who worked tirelessly to underscore the need for more equitable school funding in Massachusetts," Keenan said.

The bill invests $1.5 billion dollars in new money into the public school system over a seven-year time frame. Most of that new investment - $1.4 billion - will be in the form of Chapter 70 aid for local school districts, $90 million will be used to include transportation costs in the state's special education reimbursement program, and $10 million will support a new trust fund aimed at promoting innovation in education.

The bill also seeks to deliver high-quality education by:

- Fully funding charter tuition reimbursements.
- Expanding over four years the special education circuit breaker, which reimburses districts for extraordinary special education costs, to include transportation costs in addition to instructional cost.

structional cost.

• Raising the annual cap on Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) spending for construction and renovation, enabling more projects across the state to be accepted into the MSBA funding pipeline.

• Increasing foundation rates for guidance and psychological services in recognition of the growing need for expanded social-emotional support and mental health services.

"I'd like to thank Chairs Jason Lewis and Alice Peisch, as well as the entire Committee on Education for delivering an education funding bill that will serve to provide quality education for generations of students to come," said Senator Keenan.

The bill now awaits a vote in the Massachusetts House of Representatives. From there, it will go to the Governor's desk for approval.

If you have any questions on the Senate budget, contact Sen. John Keenan's office at 617-722-1494 or by email at John.Keenan@masenate.gov.

NORFOLK COUNTY COMMISSIONER Joseph Shea of Quincy (center) presents John P. "Jake" Comer (right) with Norfolk County's "Lifetime Achievement Award."

Quincy's Jake Comer Honored By Norfolk County Commissioners

Each year, the Norfolk County Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) recognition luncheon recognizes countless volunteers from across Norfolk County who go to great lengths to serve their neighbors, local communities and various social service and non-profit organizations.

The luncheon, held at The Lantana in Randolph, is a hallmark event for Norfolk County and its RSVP program. This year it took on an even more special meaning as Quincy's John P.

"Jake" Comer was honored with the County's "Lifetime Achievement Award." Comer, a past national commander of the American Legion, recently retired as a longtime volunteer driver for the Norfolk County RSVP's 'Rides for Vets' program, where he continued to have a tremendous impact for veterans and their families across the region.

"Anyone who knows Jake Comer knows that service to others has always defined precisely who Jake is," said Norfolk County Commissioner Joseph Shea, of Quincy, who presented the award to Comer on behalf of Norfolk County.

"Whether it's been his service in the United States Air Force, to veterans as part of his work in the American Legion, to the residents of Quincy through his work in the Quincy Housing Authority, and more recently his volunteerism through our 'Rides for Vets' program, the fact is that we are all better because of Jake's lifetime of service," Shea added.

a person each of the chiefs said it sounds like a good idea."

McDermott, age 52, was appointed sheriff in December by Gov. Charlie Baker. He was appointed to the seat after Michael Bellotti, the longtime sheriff, resigned his post to become the president of Quincy College.

McDermott said one of the first priorities he identified following his appointment was moving the county's female inmates back to Dedham from MCI Framingham, the state prison where they are currently housed.

"As soon as I got there, I asked where are our female offenders? I understand they are at MCI Framingham," McDermott said. "Everyone said yes, that's been going on for years. At least half the sheriffs do that."

"I immediately thought we should take a look at equitable treatment. In this day and age, we've got a robust menu of programs for rehabilitation and successful re-entry, and I can't guarantee the women, who should be in our care and custody but are at MCI Framingham under the Department of Correction, are getting a fair shake or equal treatment to the men."

The Dedham Alternative Center, a building located on the grounds of the county jail, could potentially house female inmates, McDermott explained.

"We're looking at that, which could house 24 offenders, as a place to bring our female offenders back to Dedham," he said.

"We can bring them over to the main jail for medical, dental, all the programming - Narcotics Anonymous classes, AA classes, anger management, college readiness. Everything that the men are getting, we should be doing for the women."

Another initiative McDermott identified is providing resources for victims of domestic violence who visit the Dedham jail.

"What I would like to see is better coordination between the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office victim coordinator and the District Attorney's Office's victim advocate. I have met with the executive director of DOVE, Sue Chandler...I said I would like in my lobby all the resources for domestic violence victims, so when they do come up we can have somebody greet them and just let them know resources are available and they don't have to live in fear," McDermott said.

"This might be the window of opportunity, while their abuser is locked up, for them to get the help they need and get out of that situation."

The sheriff said he would also like to work with advocacy groups such as DOVE to improve the curriculum for inmates charged with or convicted of domestic violence.

The Dedham jail, McDermott said, was built to house 302 inmates. It now holds close to 500 on a regular basis.

"The facility was constructed with 302 in mind, but we're double, triple bunking, depending how you put people in. I think the count today is 499," McDermott said.

"Two-thirds of the men that are up in Dedham... would be pre-trial and the other third are sentenced. We keep them separated. We also, of that 499, have about 40 U.S. Marshals detainees."

McDermott said inmates from Bristol and Plymouth Counties could be moved to the Dedham jail to receive medication-assisted treatment for substance-use disorders.

"We just started the MAT program...and we may be taking inmates from Plymouth and Bristol, because we are one of the seven counties that said we would be part of the pilot," he said. "It's not that the other seven don't want to or don't believe in it, this is just what was set up."

The county, McDermott added, does not take detainees held by Immigration and Customs Enforcement.

"I remember there was a dust up about ICE - do you take ICE detainees? Some sheriffs do, some sheriffs don't. The previous sheriff didn't. When I was asked, I said we haven't in some years and frankly don't think we have the room," McDermott said.

"And, it comes with a massive political upheaval. What I immediately thought of is there is only one way in and out of our correctional facility - that one driveway when you're coming off of Exit 17 off the highway. We don't need people forming a human shield, stopping our folks from coming into work because they're protesting ICE."

The sheriff's office employs 331 workers, McDermott said, including corrections officers and various medical personnel.

"It is a pretty broad organization. From the outside looking in, you think bad in jail that doesn't need to be there. Would a program work for this person? Could they be on an ankle bracelet and be in a sober home? Is there more counselling that they need?" McDermott said.

"If we're getting them, then usually the prosecutors and the judges have weeded all the different programs they could have qualified for, so we are getting a little bit of a tougher customer lately."

"We're getting MS-13. We're getting some Latin Kings."

Because of that, McDermott said the sheriff's response team - which he compared to a police department's SWAT unit - periodically sweeps cells inside the jailhouse. Five shanks - makeshift knives - were found during the most recent sweep.

McDermott, a Westwood Republican, said he will run in the November 2020 special election to fill the two years remaining on Bellotti's term as sheriff. The seat will be up for grabs again in 2022; the winner of the 2022 election would be eligible to serve a full six-year term.

McDermott said he is up for the challenge of running as a Republican on next year's ballot, which will include a presidential race. Bay State voters, McDermott said, are willing to cross party lines. He noted Baker, a Republican, finished with more votes in last year's gubernatorial election than Elizabeth Warren did in her U.S. Senate race.

"I like when people say you can't win as a Republican. I look at the last gubernatorial election. Gov. Baker got 100,000 more votes than Elizabeth Warren," McDermott said.

"The voters of Massachusetts are pretty savvy. They can cross over. They know who they want for what office. If you look across Massachusetts, voters do give Republicans a shot for DA and sheriff, so it's not out of the question that they will do that."

Two Democratic challengers have emerged in the 2020 sheriff's race.

James Coughlin, a retired State Police detective from Dedham, announced his bid for sheriff earlier this year.

Patrick McDermott, a Quincy Democrat and the county's register of probate, told The Sun in December he planned to run for the seat. A former Quincy City councillor, he was first elected register of probate in 2002 and would have to forgo re-election to that post to run for sheriff next year. Jerry and Patrick McDermott are not related.

Norfolk Registry Of Deeds Donates Clothing To InnerCity Weightlifting

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell recently delivered a clothing donation, through its Suits for Success program, to InnerCity Weightlifting.

"On behalf of the many kind and generous Norfolk County citizens, Registry staff and real estate professionals who contributed clothing, it was my pleasure to deliver these critically needed items to InnerCity Weightlifting," O'Donnell said. The clothing donations included men's clothing, shoes and ties.

InnerCity Weightlifting, founded in 2010, is a program designed to keep young people off the streets by using its weightlifting and gym facilities to create a community and network of support that encompasses education, job training and employment in the field of personal training.

Jason Cross, InnerCity Weightlifting Student Engagement Manager said:

"On behalf of InnerCity Weightlifting, I want to express my appreciation to the many Norfolk County residents who contributed clothing through the Registry's Suits for Success program. These direly needed clothes will help our young people when going through the job interview process."

The goal of the Suits for Success program is to help men and women reach economic independence and personal self-fulfillment. This year marks the 10th anniversary of the program at the Registry of Deeds. During that period, O'Donnell has delivered more than 7,500 pieces of clothing. Besides InnerCity Weightlifting, other non-profits who have benefited from this program include Interfaith Social Services of Quincy, Father Bill's & Mainspring of Quincy and Brockton and the Boston Veterans Administration Healthcare System Service program.

Those interested in making a clothing donation can drop off new or gently used business appropriate clothing, professionally cleaned, Monday through Friday between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. at the Registry of Deeds building, 649 High St., Dedham.

On Friday, Sept. 27, at approximately 1:10 a.m., Officers Griffin and McKim were dispatched to the intersection of Davis and Mason Street for a report of a male-female disorder.

Sgt. DesRoche arrived first and as he drove down Davis Street his attention was drawn to a male exiting the passenger side of a Toyota. He also noted there was a female crying in the driver's seat.

Upon seeing the police cruiser, the male exited the vehicle and began running easterly on Davis Street. The female told the sergeant that the male just stole her cell phone so he ordered the male to stop but he kept running. The sergeant gave chase while giving information to responding units that the suspect was last seen running behind a specific house on Davis Street.

Officer Griffin met up with Sgt. DesRoche, who was illuminating the pitch dark backyard with his flashlight. The officers heard a noise and cautiously approached a shed, where they saw the suspect through a plexi glass window that was located on the upper half of the storm door. Sgt. DesRoche ordered the suspect to show his hands and come out. When the suspect refused to come out, the officers attempted to open the door but it was locked.

The suspect ignored multiple commands to exit the shed with his hands up and then responded, "No, I'm not going." The suspect was advised that if he did not comply with the commands that the officers would be taking the door down. The suspect then screamed, "No. Come in and I'll kill you." At this time the suspect picked up hedge clippers and screamed, "Come on then. Kill me."

Concerned for their safety, the officers drew their firearms. The suspect then attempted to exit the shed by pushing open the storm door, but the officers blocked the door while ordering him to drop his weapon. The officers could see that the hedge clippers had two 12-inch blades with pointed ends. The officers believed the suspect could be under the influence of alcohol and drugs due to his highly combative state.

As more officers arrived, the suspect continued to scream while attempting to break down the door that the three officers were holding shut because the suspect continued to hold the hedge trimmers and threaten harm. The suspect then smashed his girlfriend's cell phone to the ground and stomped on it. The suspect said he wouldn't come out because he had warrants and that the police would have to kill him because he was not going back to jail.

The suspect then began shattering the Plexiglass with the pointed end of the clippers which forced the officers away from the door. The suspect broke through the Plexiglass and stepped outside, confronting the officers with clippers in hand. The officers ordered the suspect to drop the clippers and exit the shed with his hands up.

Officer Crowley had his Taser trained on the suspect as officers provided lethal coverage with their guns from about 10 feet from the suspect. Approximately 15-20 seconds later as the officers were still screaming commands to drop the weapon and exit the shed, the suspect came running at full speed towards the officers with the handles of the clippers in both hands.

Officer Crowley immediately tased the suspect which stopped the suspect's approach. The suspect immediately went to the ground with the weapon still in hand. The officers attempted to handcuff the suspect while still immobilized by the Taser.

Officer Crowley stepped on the hedge clippers to keep them secure, but suddenly the suspect overcame the taser's effect and reached out to grab the clippers while fighting to avoid being handcuffed. Sgt. DesRoche then deployed his pepper spray to the facial area of the suspect which subdued the suspect, who was then handcuffed.

An ambulance was dispatched to treat the area affected by the pepper spray. Once the situation was under control, Officer Griffin interviewed the girlfriend, who during this time kept yelling in this usually quiet neighborhood not to hurt her boyfriend, who she recently broke up with. She said she just got home and found him standing out front of her house. She said she didn't want to cause a scene in front of her house so she invited him into her car in an attempt to appease him and then drop him off at the Wollaston MBTA Station. She added she could hear hissing from the driveway and thought the suspect may have slashed her parent's tires.

She asked him if he did this and he denied tampering with the tires and then changed the subject to her seeing other men. She said as she drove off, the suspect/boyfriend/exboyfriend continued yelling at her and grabbed her cell phone checking her photos, calls and texts. Due to the screaming match, she pulled over to the curb and soon after a police cruiser pulled up to them. She said the suspect did not harm her. She was offered an emergency restraining order but elected to seek one later on.

About an hour after the arrest, an ambulance was dispatched to the cell block for an evaluation of the suspect. He was transported to the Quincy Medical Center for a further evaluation. Inside the ambulance, the suspect repeatedly banged his head off the walls of the ambulance while handcuffed to the gurney. As one of the EMTs attempted to subdue the male, he grabbed her right arm and pulled her violently. She was able to pull away but fell backwards into the wall of the ambulance. The EMT driver then pulled to the side of the road and requested assistance from the QPD cruisers following behind.

Officer Keenan was able to gain control of the suspect's right arm which broke away from the gurney. She was not injured. At approximately 3 a.m., the girlfriend and her mother came into the station lobby to report that her mother's tires were slashed.

The suspect, a 27-year-old Milford resident, but well known in Quincy, was charged with, three counts of assault by means of a dangerous weapon: (hedge clippers), two default warrants, armed assault with intent to murder, larceny from a person (cell phone), three counts of malicious destruction of personal property (cell Phone, plexiglass window, front & rear tires) and resisting arrest.

The officers involved used great restraint in taking down this suspect, who had threatened to kill them and then charged at them with a deadly weapon. Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE

On Tuesday, Sept. 27, at approximately 8:30 p.m., Sgt. Buonaugurio was dispatched to a highrise building for a call involving a male who was threatening to jump from his balcony.

Officers Jackson, Benvie and Stanley arrived on scene and were able to speak with the male from the ground level. He was on the 14th floor of the building on the balcony.

Sgt. Buonaugurio entered the building and proceeded to business someday and that's probably true, but, besides rescuing animals, there are a lot of other things that shelters are doing now. Community outreach. Helping people find ways to get their animals spayed or neutered at a low cost. Helping people keep their pets. Things like that. It's not just about taking animals in and finding new homes for them, we actually have expanded a lot."

Quincy Animal Shelter To Mark 20 Years Oct. 26

Tickets for the event are $75 each and can be purchased on the organization's website, quincyanimalshelter.org.

Mayor Thomas Koch in 2017 sought $7.1 million to construct a new animal shelter building on Quarry Street adjacent to Avalon Quincy, where the city owns 22 acres of open space. The facility would also house the Quincy Police Department's K-9 unit and the city's animal control officer. The City Council approved half that amount, $3.55 million, after several councillors balked at funding the full amount before final designs were complete.

The council in 2017 also set aside $500,000 for construction of a new dog park on the same site.

Paul Hines, the city's director of public buildings, told the council in September that the engineering survey of the future animal shelter site is still ongoing.

"There is geo-tech going on on the proposed location for the structure to anticipate what needs to be done to stabilize the dirt under the proposed building," Hines said. "That will inform what the ultimate shape of the building is. We do have the conceptual designs... but it obviously needs to be designed around what soils can support."

Hines said the new roadway connecting Quarry Street to the animal shelter and dog park site would be built this year, with final paving taking place once construction is done. He told councillors there was no timeline for construction of the shelter itself.

Sines said her organization hopes to raise funds to furnish the new shelter.

"A couple hundred thousand dollars would be a good start," she said. "We're going to be responsible for the interior - the furnishings. Things that right now they are all part of the shelter we reside in. It's going to be a big upgrade for us and we're going to be responsible for more."

The new facility, Sines said, will likely include twice as much space in which the animal shelter can operate, in addition to space for the K-9 unit and animal control officer.

"Right now, we have the capacity for 13 dogs and 25 cats. Thirteen dogs is too much, so we try to keep it a little bit less than that for the stress levels. We have 25 cats, but we also utilize a pretty large foster care network that allows us to rescue more animals. For example, I think we had about 75 kittens in foster care at some point this summer, and I think we still have another 40, because we can't house that many animals in the shelter," Sines said.

"As far as the new shelter is concerned, we're probably going to be able to double that in terms of space. But it's not just the space for animals, it's space for animal control, the Quincy Animal Shelter and the K-9 unit are going to be in that building.

"That will allow animal control to be separate from us, because right now we could get a handful of stray dogs in and they might just stay for a day or two and their owners will pick them up, but that takes up space and we're trying to get dogs in that people need to surrender. It gets pretty crowded pretty quickly."

The current animal shelter, located at 56 Broad Street, was built in the 1980s as a dog pound.

"It was built for a short-term facility and mostly for dogs. There was really nothing for cats. Dogs would come in, they would be stray, their owners would pick them up and that would be pretty much it. Unfortunately, back then if no one picked them up they were euthanized," Sines said.

"That's why in 1999 we came forward - it wasn't me personally, it was Kristie Henriksen of Siros - came forward and said if we can put volunteers together and do the work for you and take care of the animals, can we stop the euthanasia? Don Conboy and Mayor Sheets at the time agreed. That's how it all started."

Today, the Quincy Animal Shelter has 180 volunteers, an eight-person board of directors, and one paid employee, shelter director Kit Burke.

NQ Girls Volleyball Bows To Hingham

By TOM JOYCE

The North Quincy High girls' volleyball team started off the second half of the regular season with a highly-competitive Patriot League matchup.

Hosting one of the top teams in the league, the Hingham Harborwomen on Oct. 2, the Red Raiders had some trouble early on, but nearly made a comeback. Ultimately, they fell 3-2 in a tight final set. The loss put them at 5-6 on the season and 4-5 in Patriot League play.

"We took two tough back-to-back losses prior to this one," Red Raiders head coach Andrew Shaw said, "so we sat them down and tried to start from scratch. We had an amazing practice yesterday and it transferred well into the game today. I had no complaints with how my team played today."

"Volleyball is a very much a momentum sport and when you start losing games, sometimes you start losing confidence," he added. "But today we didn't lose confidence. We stayed confident the whole time and were able to win two sets in a pretty dominating way."

In the first set, the Red Raiders took an early 5-3 lead, but Hingham fought back and controlled play for much of the remainder of it. They went on a 10-2 run to go up 13-7 around the halfway point in the set. The Red Raiders countered with a 5-1 scoring run of their own, pulling within two points of their opponent, 12-14. From there, however, they could not close the gap any further and Hingham went on another scoring run. Hingham outscored the Red Raiders 11-3 over the last 14 points of the first set, taking it 25-15.

The Red Raiders turned momentum around at the start of the second set, taking an early 8-4 lead over the first 12 points. Over the next four points, Hingham erased this lead. This turned out to be part of a 12-4 run for Hingham, who would end up taking a 16-12 lead. It was a lead Hingham maintained for the rest of the set. Trailing 21-15, the Red Raiders called a timeout to regroup. Hingham ended up taking the set 25-18.

After Hingham got the first two points to open the third set of match, the Red Raiders went on a 5-0 run which included an ace from sophomore outside hitter Stephanie Huang as they went up 5-2.

From there, the two teams split the next 10 points and a serving ace from junior right side hitter Mikayla Moy put the Red Raiders up 11-7. Hingham would tie it up at 13 apiece after rallying for four straight points, but a serving error re-gave the Red Raiders the lead and possession. Both sides battled from there, tying the game at 15, 16 and 17 apiece before North Quincy gained a one-point lead and Hingham called a timeout. Hingham then tied it at 18 and 19 before the Red Raiders pulled away and went up 24-21. A serving error gave Hingham the ball back, but a block from junior outside hitter Olga Kosinski gave the Red Raiders the set 25-22.

The Red Raiders' late success carried over into the fourth set—which they started off in a dominant fashion. Although Hingham got the first point, the Red Raiders took 10 of the next 11, going up 10-2. The set was far more competitive after that once Hingham called a timeout and settled in, but the Red Raiders would also outscore them for the remainder of the set. North Quincy took the set 25-15 on a Hingham serving error.

Hingham gained an 8-5 advantage in the first half of the fifth and final set of the contest before the two teams changed sides of the court. An ace from Kosinski tied the match at 5-5, but Hingham scored the next four straight before a serving error gave the Red Raiders the ball back. The Red Raiders were unable to capitalize, going down 12-7 before calling a timeout. The Red Raiders pulled within a point, 12-13, but Hingham scored the last two straight and took the set 15-12.

Kosinski led the way for the Red Raiders with a team-high 13 kills, 43 digs and five aces in the match. Senior libero Jessica Tran shined defensively with 40 digs and senior setter Ashley Caldwell finished the game with 24 assists.

The second half of the season will include its share of tough matchups for the Red Raiders, but it also includes some where the team has already enjoyed success. Following the Hingham game, the Red Raiders schedule included six teams they had faced earlier this season and in those contests earlier in the season, they went 3-3: beating Pembroke (3-2), Hanover (3-1) and Scituate (3-1) while falling to Plymouth South (3-0), Quincy (3-0) and Brockton (3-0).

"We won against a few of them before, but you can never underestimate a team," Shaw said. "We learned about them. They learned about us. We can't come in with big heads. We have to play like every team is a great team and give them the respect they deserve."

If the Red Raiders can once again win over that trio of teams they have already beat and at least two more opponents—including Marshfield who went 3-6 in their first nine contests—it would put them at 10 wins and they would make the postseason.

"We're definitely fighting for that tournament spot, it's not out of reach," Shaw said. "We're at a turning point in our season having racked up a few losses. We have some tough teams like Plymouth North and Barnstable on our schedule, but it's not out of reach. Any team is beatable on the right day."

Presidents Edge Pembroke For First Football Win

By TOM JOYCE

Sometimes, football games aren't decided by touchdowns, but rather by what comes afterwards.

That was the case for the Quincy High football team in their road contest against the Pembroke Titans last Friday night. The Presidents offense moved the ball on the ground and their defense made three key stops after Pembroke touchdowns in what would be the team's first win of the season. The Presidents won 28-26, improving to 1-3 on the year.

"It's the conversions there," Presidents head coach Kevin Carey said. "Those are huge. We missed an extra point early and it forced us to go for two for the rest of the game. When we blocked their extra point, it's a completely different game because they have to go for two to try to win the ball game. I give their quarterback a lot of credit, he played really hard—and so did our kids. It was a hard fought game for these kids."

With 37 seconds left in the game, Pembroke capped off a three minute, 73-yard scoring drive with a five-yard touchdown run from their quarterback, pulling within two points. The drive began due to a Quincy fumble. Pembroke went for the two-point conversion to try to tie the game, but senior captain linebacker Shane Murphy and senior defensive end Devante Williams hurried Pembroke's quarterback and Murphy got his hand on the QB's leg. Under pressure, Pembroke threw an incomplete pass, protecting the Presidents' lead.

After that, Pembroke's onside kick attempt failed and Quincy knelt down the ball to end the game.

Pembroke had to go for two on their final touchdown of the game because on the one prior, Presidents senior captain and linebacker Thomas Le blocked their extra point attempt. He found a seam up the middle and got his hand on the ball on the way up thanks to tough pressure from the Presidents defensive line.

"He's a really smart football player," Carey said of Le. "He times it really well. He's a heck of a kid and a leader."

This came following a 36-yard touchdown run from Pembroke's quarterback on a fourth down QB draw with 8:44 to go in the game. The touchdown tied the contest at 20 apiece.

Quincy was effective on the ground all night, rushing for 229 yards on 39 carries (5.9 yards per carry) as they received strong play from their offensive line. However, their best run of the game came on their first play of the drive following Pembroke's game-scoring touchdown. Junior running back Isaiah Steinberg (19 carries, 164 yards) broke multiple tackles on a 58-yard touchdown run, putting the Presidents back ahead.

Then, junior quarterback Amarion Robinson (7-for-8, 115 yards) connected on a three-yard corner route pass to Murphy for the two-point conversion, putting the Presidents up 28-20 with 8:23 left in the game.

The outcome also could have been different had Pembroke not received a pair of penalties on their two-point conversion try with 10:01 left in the game. Steinberg punched in a three-yard touchdown run for the Presidents to put the team up 20-8 and on the ensuing kickoff, Pembroke returned a squibber to the end zone for a touchdown. Penalties on their first two conversion attempts moved Pembroke back 20 yards and on the third try, Pembroke could not connect with one of their receivers from that distance, keeping the score at 20-14.

"When opportunity struck, we had to take that next step," Carey said. "We were competitive. I give a lot of credit to Pembroke. It's a tough league. We've got our hands full, but I'm excited. We needed a win to get these kids going and they did a great job."

Early in the contest, it appeared as though the Presidents could win the game without much of a fight. They led 14-0 at halftime thanks to a five-yard touchdown run from Robinson with 8:36 remaining in the second quarter and a four-yard touchdown run from Steinberg with 1:22 left. Following Steinberg's TD, Robinson connected with senior captain wide receiver Derek Little (3 catches, 77 yards) on a fade for the two-point conversion.

Pembroke finally got on the scoreboard with 2:23 remaining in the third quarter on a five-yard quarterback keeper. It capped off an 84-yard drive started by a fumble recovery. On the drive, Pembroke completed four of their five passing attempts and then converted on their two-point attempt with another throw.

Carey said the win should help inspire confidence in his team as they continue competing in Patriot League play this month.

"It shows their toughness," he said. "That has grown over the past month. We really didn't look like ourselves against Archbishop Williams and then against Norwell, we played a half of a game. Against Durfee, we let it slip. But they're showing their urgency and toughness and it's coming along. We've got a lot of mistakes to fix, but we'll work to fix them."

Red Raiders Fall To Title-Defending Scituate, 28-0

SOPHOMORE QUARTERBACK Cooper Hansen tossed seven completions for 53 yards but the Red Raiders ran into a stingy Scituate and bowed 28-0 last Friday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. The Sailors are the defending Div. 5 state champions.

JUNIOR RUNNING BACK Liam Hines rushed for 61 yards on 14 carries against Scituate. Hines also made 14 tackles on the defensive side of the ball for the Red Raiders.

SOPHOMORE DEFENSIVE BACK Thomas Murray sacks Scituate quarterback Matthew Scibilio in the Sailors' 28-0 win over the Red Raiders. Murray also forced a fumble recovery on defense. North Quincy kept the game close but two touchdowns late in the second quarter gave the Sailors an insurmountable 21-0 lead at the half. Offensively, Murray had three receptions for 19 yards for the Raiders.

JUNIOR WIDE RECEIVER Brendan Hines picks up some yardage for the Red Raiders against Scituate. North Quincy hosts Pembroke in a rare Saturday afternoon game Oct. 12. Kick off is at 1 p.m.

QNQ lost both ends of a meet with Hanover under constant rain and wind. The Hanover Indians are a favorite pick to win the Division with 5 strong runners.

QNQ did their best to keep it competitive but Hanover's depth was the difference. Robert Cannon and Hanover's Ethan Bush, Chris Pacino, Tomas McDonough and Colm McDonough traversed the 2.5 mile course in lock-step with Braeden Kopp close behind. As they came onto the final 400 up on Pageant Field Cannon and Bush duked it out with Bush pulling out a two second victory. Kopp used tremendous closing speed to pick up 4th in his finest performance as a QNQ XC runner. Matt Francouer, recovering from a nagging hip injury finished 10th.

"Everyone's improving," said Coach Geoff Hennessy. "We will face another juggernaut in Plymouth South in two weeks. Our division is so competitive, I can't wait for the League Meet (Oct. 26 at the Marshfield Fair Grounds)."

On the girls side Lezly Acevedo again won her race in a photo finish over two freshmen: Jill Farrell and Anna Mahoney.

"Freshmen can improve overnight," said Hennessy. "Lezly has worked hard over the summer and during the season and it's paying off."

QNQ couldn't overcome the ever improving Indians losing 22-35. Jennie Burgess, Maeve White and Mairead Kelly all ran season bests and scored in the top 10.

QNQ travels to Hingham for a tri-meet with Hingham and Marshfield. The next divisional battle is on Oct. 16 hosting Plymouth South.

CILLIAN CONNER rushes the ball for yardage.

LIAM SAMPSON (10) carries ball for Quincy United 2/3rd graders as Mike Boyle (12), and Jeff Daignault (66) follow.

Quincy Youth Football Week 5 Highlights

On Saturday, the bulk of the Quincy United football teams and the North Quincy Apaches travelled to Natick to face the Redhawks. It proved to be a daunting task, as the Redhawks are a Bay State conference power house at several grades.

GRADE 4 - Quincy United 4th graders opened the day with their game against a tough Natick team, and showed a lot of grit. Cash Murphy, Isiah Jean and Jake Campbell were standouts for Quincy, and Jean made a nice interception in the end zone to prevent a Natick conversion, but Quincy fell to the Redhawks.

GRADE 5 - The Quincy United 5th graders (3-0) battled Natick (3-1) in a great game. Quincy got on the board first when Patrick Connor made a big sack in the end zone to get Quincy the early 2-0 lead. Later in the second quarter Ryan Sampson connected with Mecca Limage for a 20-yard touchdown reception, the conversion failed but Quincy was up 8-0. Natick answered with back to back touchdowns to take the lead at halftime 12-8.

In the 3rd quarter Sampson threw a 30-yard pass reception to Eric Di Lima, the ball was fumbled on the 5-yard line as Di Lima fought to get into the end zone, but teammate Limage scooped it up and scored. Conner added the conversion and Quincy regained the lead 15-12. Later in the second half, Conner would reach the end zone on a 10-yard run, and Quincy increased their lead to 21-12. The Redhawks again battled back and scored in the final minute of the game, the conversion failed and Quincy claimed a hard fought victory 21-18 over Natick.

Quincy's defense had 8 sacks (3 each by Di Lima and Gavin Brown), and Conner had a sack in the end zone for a safety and a crucial forced fumble that he recovered to set up the go ahead score. Coaches praised the efforts on the Quincy defense that was led by Gavin O'Hare, Aaron Fordjour, Myles Ryan, Joey Bassill, Jonas Ala, Blake Nelson and Breven Lyons. Quincy offense was tested all day by a tough Natick defense. Coaches praised the poise, leadership and hard work by Sampson, Limage, Nick Ambroult, Nicholas Monterio-Spagnolo and Dante Marinelli.

Grade 7 - Quincy United 7th grade team faced the first place, undefeated Natick team who has not allowed a single touchdown all season. Saturday proved to be no different, as Quincy United had more than they could handle from the start to finish. Natick raced to a commanding lead and at the half it was 28 to 0; that would be the final score. Quincy Head Coach Mike Flavin complimented his leading tacklers Joey Nista, Michael Galligan and Anthony Melchoine.

"Natick held us to only 4 offensive possessions. We weren't able to do much today. We need to coach better, we need to play better. We will do that," Flavin said. Quincy United has three games remaining in their regular season, and if they can pull off three wins they will have a chance to make the playoffs. "We understand what we need to do. We will take it one game at a time. Records aside we can't play like we did today. We will get better. It starts with coaching," Flavin said.

Grade 8 - North Quincy Apaches also squared off against the Redhawks in a matchup of unbeaten teams, but suffered a tough loss to a very strong Natick team. The Redhawks were able to score 2 unanswered touchdowns in the first half, and held a 16-0 lead at halftime. The Apaches would not quit, battled hard in the second half to cut into the Natick lead, 24-14. Quarterback Charlie Baker and Noel Sancho both scored for the Apaches in the second half. Sancho made a nice play on a reverse for his touchdown, and the Apaches gained some momentum, but it wasn't quite enough, as the Redhawks added a late score to increase their lead to 31-14 in the final minutes of the game.

North Quincy was led by strong performances from Michael Phinney, Simone Trainor and Ben Walinjom. North Quincy is 4-1 as they enter the final 3 weeks of regular season games.

Grade 2/3 - On Sunday, the Quincy United 2nd and 3rd graders opened the day with a matchup at Veterans Stadium against the Natick 2/3 grade team. Quincy United player James Toland opened the scoring for Quincy with a 70-yard touchdown run on the first play from scrimmage. Later in the first, Jairo Fernandez reached the end zone on a 12-yard run. Trevor Gardner added 2 more touchdowns before the half, and Cillian Conner converted for the extra point.

Conner and Gardner would both score again in the second half as Quincy United cruised to a big win over the Natick Redhawks. Quincy United Defense had another stellar day and didn't let up a first down all morning. Coaches recognized Fernandez, Jacob Corey and Mikey Boyle for strong efforts on defense.

Grade 8 - Quincy Jr Presidents faced the Milton Wildcats at the Stadium on Sunday, and were able to pull out an impressive 12-7 victory in a hard fought defensive battle. Quincy was able to score 2 unanswered touchdowns, before Milton finally reached the end zone in the closing minutes of the game to cut into the Jr Presidents' lead 12-7, but the ensuing on-side kick attempt failed and Quincy ran out the clock to hold on to the win.

Next weekend, Grade 2/3 and Grade 4 will play under the lights at Creedon Field, as they take on the Brockton Raiders (Gr 2/3) and Walpole Rebels (Gr 4). Then on Sunday at Veterans' Memorial Stadium, the 5th grade team faces Newton, Quincy 6th and 7th graders face Walpole, the Jr Presidents will take on Braintree, and North Quincy Apaches have another tough test, as they will travel to Walpole.

Quincy traveled down to Plymouth on Sept. 21 for the rematch and suffered their first setback of the season by a score of 5-3. Spenser Stebbins scored Quincy's three goals with Patrick Walsh and Tommy Christian getting the assists.

On Sept. 22, Quincy hosted Whitman-Hanson and defeated the visitors by a score of 7-3. Scoring 3 goals each were Jerry Caldwell and Joe Hennessey. Spenser Stebbins had one goal. the apartment along with Officer Stanley and members of the Quincy Fire Department. Immediately upon exiting the elevator the sergeant was approached by the caller who said that access to the male's apartment could be made via an adjacent apartment. From there, the officers could see the male standing on a metal chair with his knees extended over the edge of railing. The male did not immediately notice Sgt. Buonaugurio so he was able to quickly grab hold of him and swiftly bring him off the balcony perch.

Officers assisted in securing the male and turn him over to Brewster Paramedics. The male said that he no longer wanted to live and asked Sgt. Buonaugurio why he pulled him away from jumping. The male added he had attempted suicide in the past by ingesting Oxycontin. He stated he did not take any medications this evening prior to his attempt. The male was taken to the hospital for help.

The neighbor told Sgt. Buonaugurio that he heard the scraping noise of a chair on the deck and saw the male on his knees preparing to jump, so he called "911." A team effort of officers verbally calming the male gave Sgt. Buonaugurio time to grab hold of the male and bring him to safety.

Quincy Volleyball Improves To 13-0 With Win Over P.S.

By TOM JOYCE

No one has been able to slow down the Quincy High girls' volleyball team yet this season.

Monday was yet another case of the team showing their dominance. The Presidents hosted the Plymouth South Panthers and took care of them, winning 3-0 to improve to 13-0 on the season.

"I thought we came out pretty aggressive," Presidents head coach Jacqui Niosi said. "We had some good hitting and some big digs out there against their top hitter. I would've liked to have served a little better, but pretty good overall."

The Presidents got off to a slow start in the first set, falling behind 6-9, but they had no issue coming back. They tied the game at 11 apiece on a kill from Allison McMorrow as a part of a 5-2 scoring run. The Presidents then started to pull away, going up 20-16—a lead they were able to protect in order to win the first set 25-21.

One set later, the Presidents got off to a hot start. With Alyssa Ruan serving, the team took each of the first four points, giving themselves an early advantage. Plymouth South countered by scoring three of the next six points but after that, the Presidents erupted; they went on an 8-0 scoring run with McMorrow serving and took a 15-3 lead.

"We really started out aggressive," Niosi said. "I think we passed the ball pretty well. We got the serving going well at that point too, which really helped."

With the Presidents up 18-5, Plymouth South called a timeout and from there, they played a more relaxed game. Plymouth South outscored the Presidents 11-5 to pull within seven points. Still, the Presidents led 23-16 and were able to score the final two points of the set, winning it 25-16.

Initially, the third set was tied 7-7 after 14 points, but an 11-2 scoring run from there put the Presidents up 18-9 and they ended up taking the set 25-17 to close out the game.

Allison McMorrow led the team offensively with 16 kills in the win while Alyssa Ruan's three aces were a team-high. Niosi said the team received strong performances from its setters, including sophomore Emma Glavin. She noted senior outside hitter Julia Kapcia performed well and Ruan shined defensively as well.

In their win, the Presidents managed to rotate players in off the bench to contribute, building varsity experience.

"It's nice," Niosi said. "You never know what's going to happen or who you will need to step up on any given day. The more you can get your players experienced, the better off we are."

The Presidents qualified for the playoffs last week with an impressive 3-2 comeback victory against the previously undefeated Duxbury Dragons on Oct. 2. Although the Presidents dropped the first two sets 18-25 and 19-25, they rallied back and won the final three—and the last two of those three required extra serves. The Presidents took set three 25-20, set four 26-24 and the final set 16-14.

"That's really hard to do against any team, forget about a really good team," Niosi said. "Duxbury played unbelievable defense, so I think it showed a lot of mental toughness. You can't win a game like that unless you're mentally tough. We stayed in it and chipped away at it one point at a time."

In that victory, the Presidents had 51 kills, 49 assists and 76 assists as a team.

Since Duxbury was the only other unbeaten team remaining in the Patriot League, the victory put the Presidents in a far better position to win a league title. Winning in a game that tight against a formidable opponent gave the team a taste of what they could see in the postseason.

"It's something we've talked about," Niosi said. "You can't replicate it in practice, so until you're out there on the court during a game, you don't know what's going to happen. I know these girls enjoy being out there and playing with each other working hard. It was nice to see them step on the court and get the job done."

The Duxbury match was the first time the team had played a five set match all season; it was also only the fourth match of the season where the team did not sweep their opponent.

Even though the team's season is going well, Niosi said there is still plenty to work on.

"We just want to get faster and stronger in every part of our game," she said. "We want to make our defense stronger. We want to get our offense going smoother. We keep working on communicating better and are just taking care of the small details as well because that makes a big difference."

The Presidents next match is Friday, Oct. 11 on the road against the Hanover Indians (5:15 p.m. start time).

Keenan: Ferry 'Perfect Fit' For Quincy

MBTA ferry service back to Quincy.

"We keep pushing it. There is the MBTA pilot program. There are grants that have been applied for. We've been in communication with DOT, with the MBTA. Just two weeks ago, Representative [Bruce] Ayers and myself went out and toured the docks and the harbor around UMass Boston with the chancellor," Keenan said.

"There is a lot of interest in doing it. It's just getting everybody on the same page moving forward. Lynn wants to do it. Salem does it. Winthrop wants to do it. Quincy wants to do it. Then, you've got Hingham, which obviously runs a very successful ferry service — one of the least subsidized modes of transportation in our public transportation system and one of our most reliable.

"We think it is a perfect fit for Quincy."

There has been some pushback against the proposal based on ridership numbers, Keenan said, but he anticipates the service would become more popular the longer it is in place.

"The pushback has been, 'are the numbers there?' But, if you look historically at Hingham's numbers, it took them a relatively long time to get to the point where they are now where they are transporting hundreds of thousands of people...a year. If you ever said we're going to end ferry service in Hingham, people would not be happy," Keenan said.

"It is really an incredible mode of transportation. We think we've got to get it started and then you will see it increase in ridership pretty steadily as people become more aware of it and as people get frustrated sitting on the Neponset Bridge."

The MBTA ferry between Hingham and Boston now draws more than 3,100 customers on an average weekday, according to the state Department of Transportation.

Atlantic Development of Hingham and Maryland-based Bozzuto Development began work on a mixed-use project, dubbed The Abby in honor of Abi-

"We have amazing volunteers," Sines said. "That's the one thing that has kept us going for the last 20 years - really, really loyal, devoted volunteers. A lot of volunteers who have been with us more than 10 years. The last couple of years we have also seen an incredible increase in new volunteers coming in."

The no-kill shelter sees about 350 cats and dogs each year, Sines said; cats comprise about two-thirds of that total.

"We average about 350 animals a year. When we first started, we were doing 500 or more, so it's actually very good that our numbers are kind of heading down," she said.

People might think of an animal shelter as a sad place, but Sines said that is not the case.

"People say, 'I would never want to go to the shelter, it's such a sad place.' That couldn't be further from the truth. We are, I think, a very happy shelter. We have a lot of hope," Sines said.

"We see animals that come in very sick, they've been neglected, or maybe a person just has a situation where they just can't keep their pet anymore. That happens to people for very good reasons sometimes. We help the people to try to get through some of that, because it's very difficult for most people to give up an animal, so we provide them with a lot of hope.

"We have had stories where we look at animal and go, 'oh my god, we're never going to find this animal a home,' and then all of a sudden someone walks in and they are attracted to that particular animal and it goes home, and it is fabulous. It's not sad. I couldn't have stayed their 20 years, loving animals, if it was a sad place."

Another misconception, she added, is that the pets available for adoption have health or behavioral problems.

"The other misconception is that animals from shelters have problems - they have behavior problems or they are sick and unhealthy. At our shelter, we are very proud of the level of veterinary care that we provide for all animals," Sines said.

"If an animal comes in and it is sick, we nurse it back to health. If an animal comes in with a health problem - like say they do have a chronic problem, which sometimes happens, they could have an allergy or heart murmur - we totally disclose all of that to potential adopters so they can make a decision.

"Same thing with a behavioral issue. Not all pets are perfect - some of them you need to work with. We totally disclose that to people and we also give them the support that they need. If they bring an animal home and they are having trouble, a lot of us have a ton of experience, we have resources and we do whatever we can to make sure it's going to work out. If it's not going to work out, if it's a bad fit, we'll take the animal back and we'll work with people.

"I think that's a big misconception that some people have - that they are recycled or used pets. They're really not. They are animals that deserve a second or even a third chance sometimes."

school and their needs are supported by staff and adults; and physical safety (students feel physically safe in school).

Students answered questions as "always true," "mostly true," mostly untrue," and never true."

According to the survey results, Quincy's highest levels of strengths were:

A majority of students in grades 4 and 5 feel safe in school, teachers care about them, teachers help them with their work, school rules are fair, teachers accept them for who they are, and teachers don't allow peer teasing.

In grades 5 and 8, the majority of students felt teachers are proud of them when they work hard, and teachers provide support for students who are upset in class.

The majority of students in grades 8 and 10 are open to having friends and show respect for those from different cultures, races, religions, and sexual orientations, teachers promote respect and support those when their work is not at its best, and students help each other learn without being asked by their teacher.

The survey found some areas of concern:

The majority of students in grades 4 and 5 did not feel they wanted to learn more at home about what they studied in school.

A large percentage of grade 5 and 8 students reported that classroom books do not include people who are similar to them, such as living in similar neighborhoods or speak the same.

Many grade 8 and 10 students were found not to enjoy school because they worry about their grades and teachers don't use their ideas to help classmates learn.

Districtwide, the majority of students reported they do not have a voice in deciding school rules.

Forrester said that Quincy falls into the "typical school climate range."

Committee member Douglas Gutro's motion to refer the survey results to the Teaching and Learning Subcommittee "to take a deeper dive" was supported by his colleagues. He requested that the results be analyzed before school improvement plans were drafted.

Colleague Kathryn Hubley noted the high percentage of students who feel safe in their schools. Referring to some students who felt that they were not represented in the available schoolbooks, she requested that the library media specialists be involved in reviewing reading materials.

"We want to have books that the students want to read," she said.

Colleague Paul Bregoli expressed concern about students feeling anxiety about their grades.

"Kids feeling pressure about their grades and can't enjoy school really bothers me," he said. "Learning is supposed to be enjoyable."

Committee Vice Chairwoman Emily Lebo opined that the DESE did not provide reasons as to why some questions were asked at certain grade levels and not others.

"We need to be careful what we're seeing here the way they skewed these questions," she said.

Committee member Anthony Andronico said the data will go a long way in addressing bullying and anxiety.

"We need to have specific goals and benchmarks," he said.

Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said the results would be reviewed and included in initiatives and school improvement plans. He said the areas of concern would be addressed.

Overall, the superintendent was pleased with the survey results.

"We have a tremendous amount of positivity here," he said. "The respect the teachers have for their students and the respect students have for their teachers are very strong. I think we have a lot to be proud of (and) we have an outstanding school system when compared to everyone else."

In another matter, DeCristofaro informed the committee of several grants the district received.

These included a $148,000 grant to purchase equipment for Quincy High School's broadcasting class; $10,000 to outfit a technology/engineering classroom at Point Webster Middle School; and $7,000 to create a robotics program for grades 9 and 10 at North Quincy and Quincy high schools in memory of Luc Theberge, a Quincy High School senior who died in a car crash in New Hampshire a year ago. Luc was a member of the school's HYPER robotics team.

that Quincy lost some of its larger retail. People still say downtown, the end of it was when Sears moved, so people have been longing for more retail in the city."

"We really have T.J. Max, Marshalls now and Walmart," Keenan added. "I think people are excited about the idea of a Target or some sort of retail in North Quincy."

George F. Winters, Jr., 65

letic achievements were the friendships that Mr. Winters made through gymnastics. Many of these friendships have now lasted over 50 years. But that's what was so special about Mr. Winters, if you were his friend, you were a friend for life. He just always had this unique ability to bond with anyone and everyone.

Mr. Winters loved making people feel special and important. In doing so, he would often lean on his playful charisma to win you over. Mr. Winters loved spending most of his time laughing, joking around, and of course, playing endless pranks (many of which might be at your expense). But humor aside, Mr. Winters was always known for being extremely selfless and someone that would do anything for the people he cared about most.

In his later years, Mr. Winters really enjoyed playing backgammon, cards, gardening, watching sports, hanging with his dog (Mak) golfing, traveling, cooking and making occasional trips to the casino. Yet, above all, the most important thing in Mr. Winters's life was spending time with his grandson, Shea. He cherished every second he spent with him and had often regarded their relationship as one of the best things to ever happen to him.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
You could be caught in a torrent of advice from well-meaning friends and colleagues this week. But remember, Lamb, you are at your best when you are your own inimitable self.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
Expect strong efforts to get you to accept things as they are and not question them. But ignore all that and continue your inquiries until you're sure you have all the answers you need.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
Heavier than usual family and workplace duties compete for your time this week. Try to strike a balance so that you're not overwhelmed by either. Pressures ease by week's end.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
It's a good time for the Moon Child to show off your uniquely inspired approach to the culinary skills -- especially if they're directed toward impressing someone special.

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
You might be happy about the re-emergence of a long-deferred deal. But don't pounce on it quite yet. Time can change things. Be sure the values you looked for before are still there.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
Try to rein in your super-critical attitude, even if things aren't being done quite as you would prefer. Remember: What you say now could create an awkward situation later on.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
Although you can expect on-the-job cooperation from most of your colleagues this week, some people might insist on knowing more about your plans before they can accept them.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)
Creating another way to do things is commendable. But you could find some resistance this week from folks who would rather stick with the tried-and-true than try something new.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21)
You usually can keep your aim focused on your goal. But you might need to make adjustments to cope with unsteadiness factors that could arise over the course of the week.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
News arrives about a projected move. Be prepared to deal with a series of possible shifts, including starting and finishing times, and how much the budget will actually cover.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
A new relationship needs time to develop. Let things flow naturally. It could be a different story with a workplace situation, which might require faster and more focused attention.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)
Accept a compliment without trying to troll for any hidden reason beyond what was said. After all, don't you deserve to be praised every now and then? Of course you do.

BORN THIS WEEK: You like to weigh all possibilities before making a decision. You would be a fine judge, or even be a star in a jury room.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- Hollywood tried to compete for viewers in the 1950s with Cinemascope, CinemaScope, Smell-O-Vision, scratch-and-sniff cards and, of course, 3D, which gave new depth to black and white horror films like "Creature from the Black Lagoon," "The Scorpion" and even the musical "Kiss Me Kate," starring Kathryn Grayson, Howard Keel and Ann Miller. When the movie moguls realized it wasn't working, they produced bad TV shows to drive people back into movie theaters.

Now IMAX and 3D rule the box office, and films that don't go big and three-dimensional may have action, but no WOW factor. In today's marketplace, a film must make twice its cost to break even. "Dark Phoenix" had the benefit of the "X-Men" franchise, as well as James McAvoy, Michael Fassbender, Jennifer Lawrence and Nicholas Hoult, but is considered a flop because it cost $200 million and earned only $252 million.

"Godzilla: King of the Monsters" would've benefited from IMAX and 3D, and a big name star (Kyle Chandler and Vera Farmiga didn't draw big) because costing $200 million and earning $386 million didn't impress. The reboot of "Shaft," despite starring Samuel L. Jackson and Regina Hall, fell short of its $35 million cost, making just $21 million. "Once Upon a Time in Hollywood," with Brad Pitt and Leonardo DiCaprio, should have killed, but grossed only $330 million, less than a blockbuster when you compare it to Di-Caprio's Oscar-winning film "The Revenant" (cost $96 million and amassed $533 million).

Director Quentin Tarantino's previous film, "The Hateful Eight," cost only $50 million and earned $156 million. Judging from reviews, Brad Pitt's current release, "Ad Astra," will probably make more than "The Hateful Eight" and "Once Upon a Time in Hollywood" combined. The problem with making films by the numbers is that most of the time, the numbers don't add up.

"Superman" Henry Cavill, who stars in the Netflix series "The Witcher," is trading his cape for a magnifying glass as Sherlock Holmes in "Enola Holmes." The story revolves around Holmes' child sister, played by Millie Bobby Brown, who at age 13 broke out in the Netflix series "Stranger Things" as Eleven and the aforementioned "Godzilla: King of the Monsters." She returns with Alexander Skarsgard for the sequel, "Godzilla vs. Kong."

Skarsgard passed on another season of "Big Little Lies" to topline the CBS Access miniseries "The Stand," with James Marsden and Whoopi Goldberg. The Stephen King novel was a miniseries in 1994 starring Molly Ringwald, Jamey Sheridan and Laura San Giacomo, and it won Emmys for make-up and sound mixing. But can a "Superman" succeed as a "super sleuth" playing second fiddle to a 15-year-old? Stay tuned!

KOVELS Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Game Boards --- Antique handmade game boards are popular as decorations in homes filled with folk art. Most are for chess or checkers, and the square boards look important in a group on the wall. But there also are game boards that are other shapes. The game "Pope Joan" was popular in the 18th century and still is popular in some countries. The rules for the game first appeared in Hoyle's rule book in 1826. Three to eight people may play on a circular board with eight round "wells" surrounding a center well that holds game pieces. Four picture cards, plus four others called Matrimony, Pope, Intrigue and Game, were used. The winner was the player who ran out of cards first. An elaborate Pope Joan board was sold at a James D. Julia auction a few years ago for $1,000. The board is 12 1/2 inches in diameter and was made from a cut-out wooden circle and painted green and red. Playing cards were painted around the center well.

Look for other game boards, even printed ones with interesting graphics, from the 1930s and after. Do not hang them in the sun because printing, especially from the 1940s and '50s, will fade to blue.

Q: I bought a Roseville pedestal in the Moss pattern for $8 at a Goodwill store, and I'm trying to get an idea of its worth.

A: Roseville Pottery Company was in business from 1890 to 1954. It started in Roseville, Ohio. Another plant was opened in Zanesville, Ohio, in 1898. Moss pattern was introduced in 1936 and was made in Coral, Russet and Sapphire. A Moss pedestal with matching jardiniere would sell for about $800 to $1,000. Pedestals without the jardiniere don't sell well and are worth under $200.

Q: My copper teakettle got overheated on the stove, the water boiled away, and the spout came off. Is this something that can be repaired?

A: Yes, the spout can be soldered back on. It can be difficult, since copper spreads the heat and the spout must be held firmly in place until the solder sets. Don't use lead-based solder, since the lead will leach into the boiling water when you use the kettle. A metalsmith will be able to repair the teakettle and can tell you how much it will cost in advance. If it is not a valuable antique, you may decide to just buy a new kettle.

STICKELERS

What is the longest common word in the English language that consists entirely of letters from the second half of the alphabet?

©2019 King Features Syndicate

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was multitalented Robert Anton Wilson -- he was, at various times in his life, a novelist, essayist, psychologist, editor, philosopher, playwright and mystic -- who made the following observation: "It only takes 20 years for a liberal to become a conservative without changing a single idea."

* It took between 75,000 and 80,000 workers to build the Panama Canal, linking the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans across the Isthmus of Panama.

* When the Barbie doll was first introduced in 1959, it was described in The New York Times as a "crushing bomb." So much for early reviews. Since then, more than a billion Barbies have been sold in more than 150 countries. Mattel, the doll's maker, claims that more than 100 dolls are sold every minute of every day.

* William Howard Taft, the 18th president of the United States, was quite a large man. Quite a large man, indeed. In fact, he was so large that his 300-pound bulk got stuck in a White House bathtub, and he had to summon help to extricate himself.

* Pope Benedict IX held the office three different times.

* There are lots of sports fans out there, and a lot of sports to enjoy: football, basketball, soccer, baseball, hockey ... olive oil wrestling? OK, maybe there aren't a lot of oiled wrestling events here in America, but in Turkey it's the national sport. Kirkpinar, as it's known there, has been popular since the Ottoman Empire. The Turkish town of Edirne has been hosting the annual tournament since 1361.

Thought for the Day:

"Even a purely moral act that has no hope of any immediate and visible political effect can gradually and indirectly, over time, gain in political significance."

-- Vaclav Havel

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* Geometric patterns painted on walls are hot right now, and they can add interest to a room for a small price tag. One place where you don't want to skimp, though, is on your low-tack masking tape. Buy a good-quality painter's tape that will give a really clean line. Take the time to press it down so that no paint bleeds underneath. Then, after painting, wait until paint is dry to the touch before removing.

* One quick way to reduce a single-use plastic at the coffee shop: Skip the coffee stirrer. It's easy if you put your cream and sweetener in the cup first, then fill. The coffee gets mixed up as you fill your cup.

* "Old newspapers can be used to clean glass and chrome. They leave behind less lint than paper towels and can be used with both a misting of water or glass cleaner." -- I.R. in Kentucky

* If you like to saute with butter, be sure to add a bit of oil to the pan as well. Butter burns more quickly at higher temperatures, but the oil will stabilize it and give you more time to cook. Plus the combo is tasty for vegetables.

* "My boys drink a lot of milk. My secret weapon is powdered milk. Yep, I mix up a gallon and then cut it half and half with whole milk. It stretches my supply and my buying power, plus I never really run out of milk." -- D. in Washington

* "Use your egg slicer to get even slices of mushrooms. Even kids can help with this fun task. (Just make sure they are supervised at all times.)" -- M.M. in New Hampshire

Quincy project were also awarded the contract to build a mixed-used project at the Quincy Center T station. The firms' proposal for Quincy Center submitted to the MBTA included 600 apartments, 225,000 square feet of office space, and at least 600 parking spaces. The developers planned to construct the project in three phases, with the entire project completed in 2031.

The Quincy Center project remains in the planning stages, Keenan said.

"It's the early planning stages. They've got the designated developer...I think they are still in discussions with the city about what they are going to do, what the timing will be," Keenan said.

"We will continue to monitor that and then when they get closer, I am sure there will be some interaction between all of us as far as coordinating with the MBTA and DOT."

The MBTA is also working to repair the garage at the Quincy Adams station. The goal of the project, which began last summer and should be complete by October 2021, is to extend the lifespan of the 2,500-car garage by 40 years. A similar project is also underway at the Braintree station, which has a 1,300-car garage.

Keenan said the work at Quincy Adams has gone smoothly.

"Last we heard was that things were progressing pretty well. We can kind of gauge that, not only from what we hear from the MBTA, but also what we hear from people and we have not had any complaints from people," he said.

The reopening of the long-closed gate that provides pedestrian access to the station from Independence Avenue late last year has helped take pressure off the parking garage, Keenan said.

"Most of what I hear... is that people are pleased with the opening of the gate on Independence Ave and that has taken a little bit of the parking pressure off, because people used to drive down, around and into the lot," he said. "Now they can just walk from the neighborhood."

The T is also putting the finishing touches on Wollaston station, which reopened in August after it was shut down for 20 months while it was rebuilt to modern standards. Keenan said the state is likely to pursue development opportunities at both Wollaston and Quincy Adams stations in the future — the state had previously listed part of the Quincy Adams parking lot as available for disposition, though the area ended up being restriped in anticipation of the garage renovations.

"I think you will see it long-term on both," Keenan responded when asked if development was possible at Wollaston or Quincy Adams.

"The parcel at Quincy Adams a few years ago was declared available for disposition," he added. "I do not believe Wollaston was included at that time as being available for disposition and I don't think it has been declared available since. The focus was on getting the station rebuilt and the parking lot back in place. But most everybody who looks at Wollaston station now thinks it would be an appropriate place for development, provided it is properly scaled and it fits with the neighborhood."

The MBTA, Keenan noted, is required to seek new funding sources.

"The MBTA is charged by legislation at developing their own source of revenue outside of fares. So, for instance, they signed a 99-year lease for the North Quincy parking lot," Keenan said.

"I suspect as the pressure comes on the T to continue modernizing, they will need money, they will look at all their sites, as they should, see if they are appropriate for development, declare them available for disposition and look to get a revenue stream from it, either a one-time hit with the sale or a long-term revenue stream with a lease."

Atlantic and Bozzuto will make $230 million in lease payments to the MBTA over the course of a 99-year lease agreement for the North Quincy station's parking lot. They proposed paying an additional $168 million over 99 years to lease the Quincy Center station.

While development is possible at Wollaston station in the future, Keenan said there is nothing immediately planned for the site and he would not support starting a new project there until after the North Quincy construction is complete.

"There is nothing in the short term," Keenan said of Wollaston station. "They have not declared it available for disposition. All there has been is speculation that it would be a good spot for development, so there is nothing as far as I know that is in the works."

"Quincy Center is ahead of Wollaston at this stage and that's not even at the point where they have concrete plans," Keenan added. "I would say people should not be alarmed that anytime soon Wollaston station parking lot will be developed."

"There is just speculation for it being an appropriate place for development, but there are no plans."

Quincy Climate Action Network will host a candidate night Thursday, Oct. 17 at 7 p.m. in the church hall at United First Parish Church of Quincy, 1306 Hancock St., across from the James R. McIntyre Government Center (old City Hall).

QCAN has invited all candidates in contested city council races as well as both mayoral candidates; at press time most candidates had already accepted.

Questions to the candidates will involve city policy on energy and climate, said David Reich, board chairperson of QCAN. Candidates will see some but not all of the questions in advance, Reich said, and depending on their answers, will get follow-up questions to further probe their ideas and knowledge.
